POLITICAL PUGILISM.

Bill Dave Goshorn Assaults a Kanawha Journalist.

HE FEELS MUCH AGGRIEVED

At a Reply to an Alleged Interview in the Register, and, Backed by his Brother, Beats Manager Reber, of the Charleston Tribune.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., April 16.-Recently there appeared in the Wheeling Register an alleged interview with Bill Dave Goshorn, the so-called Greenback labor leader.

Saturday's Charleston Tribune contained a communication in reply to the interview and holding Bill Dave up to ridicule. To-day, in front of the Hotel Ruffner, Goshorn met Mr. Reber, of the Tribune, and demanded the name of the correspondent.

Mr. Reber refused to comply with the demand, when Goshorn struck him with his fist. Goshorn's brother also struck the newspaper man, and Bill Dave followed up his brother's attack with a heavy cane. Mr. Reber was badly cut. His wounds are painful but not dangerous.

The attack, which Bill Dave took exception to, contained some very uncomplimentary allusions to his connection with the campaign of 1884, charging him with insincerity, etc., and intimating that he was now intriguing with the Democrats to overthrow the present labor vote to that party this year.

The communication, which is quite lengthy, concludes as follows: "Bill further says, 'In 1884 a fusion was effected. It was opposed to it at first, but after I saw it was indicated by our party that it was best to make it, I fell into line and gave my best efforts to secure a victory.' So you did, Billy Blown. You went to Buckhannon after a conference with the Democratic bosses and fought fusion, but it was consummated, just as though your strong and mighty hand had been bested against it. Yes, you gave the best efforts of your life to secure a victory, as you were on the point of doing so, you tried to accomplish in that notable year of 1884, what you are now trying to accomplish, a straight Union Labor ticket in behalf of the Democracy, or a fusion with them. The purpose is the same in any case, the success of the Democratic ticket."

We recognize the handiwork, we see the carmine and cloven foot of the renegade Republican through that public inflicting, high stilled, rhetorical blow-horn. The language is so forcibly familiar, as much so as the office hours and bill of fare of the aforesaid renegade Republican-office-seeking aspirant, who leaves his party for his party's good and goeth over to them who hold the loaves and fishes, we can but conclude that, in our opinion, we read so plainly that though running, we see your scheme."

THE HINGE FACTORY.

The Directors Decide to Rebuild the Burned Building.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Wheeling Hinge Company was held yesterday afternoon to take action on the question of rebuilding the factory structure, destroyed by fire Saturday night.

It was decided to rebuild as soon as possible, and the work will commence immediately upon the completion of the adjustment of the insurance by the representatives of the company interested.

This intelligence will be welcome to the workmen in the burned factory. There was thought to be doubt as to whether the work would be rebuilt, and the employees were feeling very gloomy after the fire until the directors' action was known.

MT. DE CHANTAL.

The Closing Musical Recitals of the Season at the Mount.

It is with feelings of mingled regret and pleasure that we record the closing of the last two musical recitals at Mt. De Chantal: regret that they are the last of the term, pleasure that they may be deemed worthy of that distinction.

In the first of these Miss Ida Wernet and Eugene Schmitt played a very well. Miss Katherine Stephens and Annie Moran deserve special mention for the taste with which they rendered their piano selections. Miss Lillie Snyder read a poem by Longfellow with evident appreciation and in a full, clear voice.

Miss Edith Scott read an original essay on Mlle. Montpensier, and deserves much praise for both reading and composition. And Miss Emma Lyons and Eugene Schmitt gave a very hearty applause for their vocal solos. Miss Katie Hagan was the violinist of the occasion. She has naturally a strong, clear touch and played without hesitation; but her tones were, at times, rendered very defective by the sudden incident of such an ordeal. Miss Kate Deegan has in proved greatly in vocal music. She sang with much taste and finish, and well deserved the encomiums bestowed upon her. This recital took place in Passion week, and Miss Edith Scott read a poem most appropriate to the season, presenting to her audience a vivid picture of the Mother of Sorrows contemplating the sufferings her Divine Son was to endure. While her words still lingered in our ears, the beautiful tones of Madame's Messiah broke the silence, and a spell bound, we listened to the prophet's lament.

"He was despoiled and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. He gave us back to the sinners, and his cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: He hid not His face from shame and spitting."

It is no easy task to interpret such a selection, yet Miss Donahue succeeded admirably, and the merits of her interpretation were attested by the breathless interest with which it was heard.

At the second of the recitals the following programme was carried out:

PART I.
